Charcha For Change

Charcha For Change was a talk discussing the most important issue of the hour, i.e. Climate Change. It was an initiative of Josh Talks and UNDP who brought together an environment for us all that talked about climate. In a world where many people fail to believe climate change exists, the organisers wanted to initiate a conversation over it to lay the foundation for some innovative ideas for a sustainable and safe future.

Fifteen volunteers attended the event held on 5th August at Indian Habitat Centre. Volunteers felt inspired by the welcome address by Ms. Shoko Noda who is UNDP Resident Representative followed by a number of talks of innovators and entrepreneurs who have done a commendable work in this field. There was also an environment pop quiz on environment conservation and a panel discussion on "Climate Change and Innovative Paths to a sustainable future" which was very insightful.

26. Food distribution drive to poor people near college

An attempt to prevent food wastage

Most of the informal functions organized in the campus witness wastage of large quantities of leftover food. Agitated with this wastage of resources, one of our NSS volunteer, Utkarsh Singh (inspired from a last year's volunteer Manisha) came up with a suggestion of collection and distribution of all leftover food to hungry and needy people as and when the college will organize any such party. The idea was implemented in very first event 'Fresher's party' organized by every department. Once the party was over, NSS Volunteers collected the food from all departments (each department had its own catering arrangement). They were provided bigger utensils for collection by the canteen owner Mr. Tarun. They hired a rickshaw and went near the Gurudwara few hundred meters away from our college and distributed the food among the labor class people. The food was sufficient to be served to around 110 people. The benefitted people were also given a lesson to throw their used paper plates in dustbin. This took care of littering on the road.
